The humble, plebelan peakut is in a fair way to be wrested from its obscure sphere and to be placed in the front ranks of popular and pleasing eatables. Physicians have declared that the nut is "rich in albumen, containing 50 per cent of it, and that it also contains 20 per cent of fat and non-nitrogenous extractive matters." All kinds of dishes are now extractive matters. All kinds of disaes are how being prepared of peanuts, soup being especially recommended. It is made as split pen soup is made, soaking the peanuts over night. Peanut sandwiches are said to be excellent, made by peunding the skinned nuts and spreading thickly on silves of buttered bread. Mayonnaise dressing may be mixed with the nuts or grated cheese. Boiled in salted water, roasted and salted, pounded or grated, the peanut is now a standard dish.
